"A man remains a Christian as long as he makes the effort to give the central assent, as long as he tries to utter the fundamental Yes of trust, even if he is unable to fit in or resolve many of the details. There will be moments in life when, in all kinds of gloom and darkness, faith falls back on the simple, 'Yes, I believe you, Jesus of Nazareth; I believe that in you was revealed that divine purpose which allows me to live with confidence, tranquility, patience, and courage.' As long as this core remains in place, a man is living by faith, even if for the moment he finds many of the details of faith obscure and impracticable.

Let us repeat; at its core,
faith is, not a system of knowledge, but trust."

Joseph Ratzinger
from "Faith and the Future"
